Headline:
Plenty of dry weather over the next few days.

Today:
A dry and bright morning after any patches fog have cleared. Becoming rather cloudy from the north in the afternoon with the odd shower possible later. A cool northerly breeze. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Tonight:
Any showers quickly dying out with clear spells developing, especially further west where the odd mist patch is possible. Breezy further east, especially over Kent. Minimum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Thursday:
Mostly dry on Thursday with the best of any brighter spells in the west. Winds easing inland during the day but feeling chilly in the breeze. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Mostly dry Friday with sunny spells. Clouding over on Saturday with rain and strong winds later. Early rain clearing on Sunday then dry with long sunny spells. Wind easing later.
